Homeowner's insurance will cover injuries for people who've been injured in dog bite cases. They will cover medical bills. They'll cover lost wages, they'll cover scarring, they'll cover all these things that occur when a dog injures someone. They'll even cover your dog's vet bills as well. So all of that is covered by someone else's homeowner's insurance. You need an attorney to help you get your value of your case. And that's what people don't know. What is the value in the case? So if you call an attorney, you definitely will get an attorney who knows what's the value of a dog bite case and that's not something the lay person would know.
